

Overview

Would you like to enhance your knowledge so you are better prepared to contribute to informed conversations regarding Indigenous-Canadian relations in your personal or professional life? If so, the Aboriginal Canadian Relations Certificate may be a perfect option for you.

The Aboriginal Canadian Relations program, is a five credit Board of Governors' certificate, available to professionals, community members and students who have desire to learn more about the history of Indigenous nations with the Canadian state. This flexible educational option allows for a diverse experience. Learners can decide to take courses at their own pace, online or in a classroom setting, with a variety of courses to choose from - perfect for community leaders and professionals already in the workforce. It is also a great option for students, who are completing a college diploma program at Confederation College, and wish to heighten their knowledge base regarding Indigenous issues. It is possible to graduate with a diploma as well as the Aboriginal Canadian Relations certificate!

This certificate will provide you with knowledge regarding Indigenous-Canadian relations and Indigenous worldviews and perspectives, better equipping you to understand the historical context that affects current Indigenous and Canadian relationship building processes.

Top Highlights

- Gain career-related skills and expertise on Indigenous and Canadian relations
- Full- or part-time studies available in person or online
- Add this certificate to a Confederation College diploma

Learner Testimonial

This is a program for everyone. It is helpful to staff, students and community members alike. I hope that everyone will take the time to learn the truth about our country and its relationship with our Indigenous peoples and First Nations communities, including how we can do better. This program is a really rewarding way to do that.
